1. Read the passage given below: 8 Marks

Kausani is situated at a height of 6,075 feet in the Central Himalayas. It is an unusually attractive little town. It covers just about 5.2 sq. km. It lies to the north of Almora in Uttarakhand's picturesque Kumaon region.

Kausani provides a 300-km wide breathtaking view of the Himalayas. It is the most striking aspect of the place. Snow-capped peaks are spread in a stately row. They stare at you in silvery-white majesty. The most famous peak on view is Nanda Devi, the second-highest mountain in India. It is situated at a height of 25, 645 feet and 36 miles away as the crow flies. The other famous peaks on view are choukhamba (23,420 feet) and Trishul (23,360 feet). Then there are also Nilkanth, Nandaghunti, Nandaghat, and Nandakot. On a clear day, the blue of the sky makes a splendid background to these peaks. At sunrise and at sunset, when the color changes to a golden orange, the scene gets etched in your memory.

When Gandhiji visited this place in 1929, its scenic beauty held him spellbound. He named it the 'Switzerland of India'. He prolonged his two-day stay to fourteen days, making time to write a book, 'Anashakti Yoga'. The place where he was staying was originally a guest-house of the tea estate. It was renamed 'Anashakti Ashram' after the book.

Kausani is the birthplace of Sumitranandan Pant, India's poet laureate. Its natural surroundings inspired many of his poems. Its tea gardens mingle with dense pine forests and fruit orchards. The area is also host to many fairs and religious ceremonies. If Uttaranchal is the abode of gods, Kausani is God's own backyard. There is no traffic, no one is in a hurry. If serenity could be put on a canvas, the picture would resemble Kausani.

On the basis of your reading of the above passage, answer the following questions :

(a) Where is Kausani situated? 1 Mark

Ans: Kausani is located in the Central Himalayas at a height of 6075 feet and spans an area of 5.2 square kilometers. It is located in Uttarakhand's scenic Kumaon area, to the north of Almora.

(b) What is the most striking aspect of Kausani? 1 Mark

Ans: Kausani offers a 300-kilometer-wide panoramic vista of the Himalayas, with snow-capped peaks standing in a majestic row, staring at one another in silvery-white majesty. This is Kausani's most noticeable feature.

(c) Which is the most famous peak on view from Kausani? 1 Mark

Ans: The most notable peak visible from Kausani is Nanda Devi, India's second-highest peak. As the crow flies, it is located at a height of 25,645 feet and 36 miles away.

(d) How did Kausani influence Sumitranandan Pant ? 1 Mark

Ans: Sumitranandan Pant, India's poet laureate, was born in Kausani. Its tea gardens, which were interspersed with lush pine forests and fruit orchards, impacted the poet and provided inspiration for many of his writings.

(e) When does the view of peaks become so memorable? 1 Mark

Ans: On a clear day, the view of the peaks is particularly striking, with the sky providing a stunning backdrop. The scene is ingrained in one's memory during sunrise and sunset when the color changes to a golden orange.

(f) How can we say that Gandhiji was greatly charmed by the natural beauty of Kausani? 1 Mark

Ans: When Gandhiji visited Kausani in 1929, he was so taken aback by the natural splendor that he dubbed it the "Switzerland of India." He even extended his two-day visit to fourteen days, inspiring him to compose "Anasakti Yoga."

(g) What makes Kausani a calm and quiet place? 1 Mark

Ans: Kausani is said to be God's personal retreat. There is no traffic or hurry, and the atmosphere is serene. As a result, Kausani has developed into a serene and peaceful location.

(h) Why, do you think, is Kausani known as 'God's own backyard'? 1 Mark

Ans: Kausani is a place where tranquility, peace, and peacefulness coexist. The location offers a panoramic view of the Himalayan peaks. As a result, if Uttaranchal is the home of the gods, Kausani is God's backyard.

2. Read the passage given below: 12 Marks

1. I rested for a moment at the door of Anand Bhawan, on Market Road, where coffee-drinkers and tiffin-eaters sat still at their tables, uttering low moans on seeing me. I wanted to assure them, ''Don't mind me, you are hugging the cash box — you are a coward, afraid even to breathe. Go on, count the cash, if that is your pleasure. I just want to watch, that's all. If my tail trails down to the street, if I am blocking your threshold, it is because I'm told, I'm eleven feet tip to tail. I can't help it. I'm not out to kill — I'm too full. I found a green pasture full of food on my way. I won't attack until I feel hungry again. Tigers attack only when they feel hungry, unlike human beings who slaughter one another without purpose or hunger.''

2. To the great delight of children, schools were being hurriedly closed. Children of all ages and sizes were running helter-skelter, screaming joyously, ''No school, no school. Tiger, tiger!'' They were shouting and laughing and even enjoying being scared. They seemed to welcome me. I felt like joining them. So I bounded away from the restaurant door. I walked along with them, at which they cried, 'The tiger is coming to eat us; let us get back to school!''

3. I followed them through their school gate while they ran up and shut themselves in the school hall securely. I climbed up the steps of the school, saw an open door at the far end of a veranda, and walked in. It happened to be the headmaster's room. I noticed a very dignified man jumping on the table and heaving himself up into an attic. I walked in and flung myself on the cool floor, having a special liking for cool stone floors.

4. As I drowsed, I was aware of cautious steps and hushed voices all around. I was in no mood to bother about anything. All I wanted was a little moment of sleep; the daylight was very bright.

On the basis of your reading of the above passage, answer the following questions:

(a) How did the diners at Anand Bhawan react to seeing the tiger? 2 Marks

Ans: When the diners at Ananda Bhavan saw the tiger, they let out faint moans. Furthermore, schools were hurriedly closed, and children of all ages ran helter-skelter, yelling joyfully, "No school, no school, tiger, tiger!"

(b) When do tigers attack? In this context, how are human beings different from tigers? 2 Marks

Ans: "I won't attack until I feel hungry again," it claimed of tigers that don't attack until they're hungry.

People destroy anyone and everyone whenever they want, as the tiger put it: "Tigers attack only when they are hungry, unlike humans who slaughter one another without purpose or hunger."

(c) Why were children happy and even enjoying being scared? 2 Marks

Ans: The students were overjoyed to see that their schools had been closed. However, they were afraid of the tiger's presence and fled around the helter-skelter, yelling joyfully, "No school, no school." "Tiger, tiger," they said, laughing and apparently enjoying their terror.

(d) What did the headmaster do on seeing the tiger? What did the tiger-like to do in the headmaster's office? 2 Marks

Ans: When the headmaster saw the tiger, he leaped on the table and heaved himself up into the attic. The tiger dropped himself onto the cool stone floor (he had a special liking for cool stone floors) and all he wanted was a brief respite from the blazing sunlight.

Subject: Complaint against the unauthorized use of loudspeakers at public places

Respected Sir,

I, Anjana Mathur, a resident of F-112, Kailash Colony, am writing to you to emphasize the need of ending the unlicensed use of loudspeakers in public spaces. After hearing about my infant nephew's recent ear surgery due to loud noise, I'd like you to spread the word about the importance of maintaining quiet in the neighborhood. The high decibel sounds influence and disrupts a person's mental phenomena, making him nauseous, irritable, and unable to concentrate on his activity. Enjoyment or refreshment can take place without such deafeningly loud noises that leave one feeling unbalanced and exhausted. As a result, I feel that loud music should be prohibited, at least in public spaces.

I would be grateful if you could check into this matter and publish it in your daily column so that my appeal would reach as many people as possible. Let us all work together to raise awareness.

Thanking you

Yours sincerely,

Anjana Mathur

Heavy rains in Jammu and Kashmir caused floods, landslides, house collapses, and heavy loss of life and property. Write an article in 100 – 120 words on 'Floods – Causes and Prevention'. You are Anita/Aman. 5 Marks

Ans: Floods- Causes and Prevention

By-Anita

Mankind is progressively coming closer to a dark den once again. Man's insatiable desire to expand his property and estates has led him to deforest the planet. Trees, the primary source of oxygen, are gradually disappearing from the earth's surface. Trees are the creatures that grip soil particles to keep them from degrading. Massive deforestation causes soil to be shifted from its original location during rainstorms, resulting in landslides. In Jammu and Kashmir, this is the situation. Global warming and the effects of greenhouse gases are hotly disputed topics all over the world. Carbon dioxide levels have risen above the normal average due to continued deforestation, resulting in a rise in global temperatures. As a result, glaciers have begun to melt and flood the surrounding areas. Man's greed has claimed another victim in Kashmir, causing incessant.

Progress is only welcomed in the positive sense if it does not cause harm to others. Technological progress is a benefit, but we are now witnessing the evil of science combined with man's aspirations. To combat deforestation, the government should implement an afforestation program and install rainwater collecting devices in homes to collect, store, and recycle rainwater. We will soon discover a better way to survive and live for generations on this planet.

Hints: humble family background — no guidance or support — ambition — difficulties — didn’t give up — long struggle paved the way for success

Ans: “Wake up, boy!” Mrs. Murthy screamed. “Wake up, Ramesh!” Ramesh rubbed his eyes and awoke from the mat on the porch, startled. He went to the cowshed, limping on his foot, gathered the dried grass, and limped inside, still exhausted from the previous day's battle. Meanwhile, inside, Mr. Murthy screamed, “When will I have my tea?” Ramesh rushed towards the kitchen with a leap and returned with his father's tea. He sat on the porch with his books after massaging his father's rough, tired shoulders. His mother yelled, "Ramesh! Ramesh!" His mother said, "Wash these clothes." Ramesh stood up, exhausted, to carry out his mother's command. Ramesh is burning his hands while making roti for his family while his pal Anjum is in class. “Phew!” Ramesh exhaled deeply. His objective was to be the best in his class at matriculation. His ambition was to see his name in the morning paper. His dream is to see his father jump for excitement. His desire was to see his mother proudly crying out to their neighbor with pride. Months passed, Ramesh sat for the exam, and one bright morning, Mr. Murthy said, “Ramesh, you topped the exam.” “I knew,” Ramesh whispered with watery eyes, pale-faced and surprised. I eventually triumphed because I was adamant about achieving my goal.”

Complete a story in 150 – 200 words from the outline given below: 10 Marks

Birds lived — a forest — one year hot and dry — the kingbird suggested to migrate — a greedy sparrow noticed carts with baskets of grain — the sparrow dashed to eat — but warned her friends not to go — the owner might kill them

— birds scared — the greedy sparrow enjoyed her meal — owner spread a net — was caught

Ans: There was once a big tree in the gloomy forest that was the home to lovely birds. They all chirped, crowed, and cawed at the same time. The weather was hot, dry, and depressing as summer neared. The monarch, dissatisfied and dismayed by the state of his subjects, decided to seek refuge in a cooler location. They were, however, in need of food and were unable to locate any. A greedy sparrow came across a shuttered and decaying business where it observed trolleys loaded with grain baskets. It ran to eat on the grain, unable to contain itself. When word got out to the other birds, they were all over it, ready to pounce on the food. Fearing that he might lose his part of the food, the sparrow told his other birds that the owner may murder them. This frightened the birds. The sparrow flew to the carts, hoping to delve into the grain for all eternity, triumphant in his goal. He was savoring and appreciating his dinner, completely oblivious to the fact that the proprietor had already laid the net to catch it. The net closed down as soon as the sparrow poked at it, catching the eager bird.

When I got to New Mullion, my eager expectations of a sweet and simple country village were severely disappointed. Its streets were rivers of mud, with rows of wooden shops, either painted a sour brown, or bare of any paint at all.

(a) Who is 'I'?

Ans: In this context, "I" refers to a young lawyer who has been dispatched forty miles into the countryside, to the town of New Mullion, to serve the summons on a guy named Oliver Lutkins, who will be a witness in a legal case.

(b) Why was 'I' disappointed?

Ans: The young lawyer was dissatisfied since his hopes for a beautiful and modest country village were dashed. The streets of New Mullion were rivers of mud, along with rows of wooden stores that were either painted a sour brown or naked of any paint.

(c) What do the word 'expectations' mean?

Ans: The word "expectations" refers to something that is anxiously desired. In this case, muddy streets and unadorned wooden shops badly disappointed the young lawyer's hopes of country life.

''Never shall a young man,

Thrown into despair

By those great honey-colored

Ramparts at your ear,''

(a) Who is the speaker of these lines? Who is he speaking to?

Ans: These lines were taken from W.B. Yeats's poem "For Anne Gregory," and the poet personally spoke the words.

These words were written for Anne Gregory, who assisted Yeats in building the Abbey Theatre.

(b) What does the young man mean by 'honey-colored ramparts'?

Ans: In these lines, Yeats describes how the golden tresses fall over Anne Gregory's ears and around them in the same way that the defenses enclosing a castle or fort against invaders encircle them.

(c) What does the word 'despair' mean?

Ans: An unpleasant state is referred to as "despair." In this context, the poet writes that the sight of the lady's "honey-colored ramparts" "throws the young men into despair," because the presence of these strands of hair enveloping her ears enhances her beauty, and the young men despair because their love for them is heightened by the lady's very charming appearance.

9. Answer the following questions in 30 – 40 words each: 2× 4=8 Marks

(a) Why did the Buddha choose Benares to preach his first sermon?

Ans: As the most sacred of the Ganges dipping spots, Buddha presented his first sermon in the holy city of Benares. His first sermon has been saved and is on display here. It expresses Buddha's understanding of an inexplicable form of sorrow. “The life of mortals in this world is turbulent, fleeting, and full of pain,” Buddha stated. Because there is no way for those who have been born to avoid dying; death comes with old age; living beings are of such a nature.”

(b) Why didn’t Valli want to go to the stall and have a drink? What does it tell you about her?

Ans: Valli had been saving whatever spare coins that came her way, resisting every urge to buy peppermints, toys, balloons, and the like, and had finally saved sixty pence. She had even resisted a strong desire to ride the merry-go-round despite having the funds, all in order to save money for a bus ticket. She'd already spent sixty pence on the ride, and she didn't have enough money to buy a drink. Valli didn't go to the stall to get a drink because of this.

We learn about her passion and desire to pursue her dream despite her financial constraints. Valli is forthright and humble in refusing the conductor's drink. She doesn't want to take other people's gifts in order to live her pleasures. She will spend as much money as she can.

(c) Why was Matilda in a hurry to go to her house after the ball?

Ans: Matilda's husband threw the modest wraps that had carried poverty clashed with the grandeur of the ball outfit around her shoulders after the party. Matilda, on the other hand, was unconcerned about this and wanted to go away quickly so she wouldn't be recognized by the other women who were dressed in luxurious furs. She didn't even wait for the cab, rushing down the stairs.

(d) What filled Bholi, a dumb cow, with new hope?

Ans: At school, Bholi's teacher told her that she would be able to finish an entire book in one sitting. When she accomplishes so, she will be offered a larger book and other benefits. The teacher assured her that she would grow more knowledgeable than the rest of the villagers over time and that no one would be able to insult or laugh at her. People would begin to appreciate her, and Bholi would be able to talk clearly without stammering. All of this gave Bholi a new sense of hope.

10. Answer the following question in 80 – 100 words: 4 Marks

Through 'The Sermon at Benares', the Buddha preached that death is inevitable and we need to overcome the suffering and pain that follows. Based on your reading of the lesson, write how one should cope with the death of a loved one.

Ans: According to Buddha, mortals' lives in this world are turbulent, fleeting, and filled with misery. There is no way to live without dying. "...While the family watches and weeps, one by one, mortals are dragged away, like an ox being led to slaughter," he taught. As a result of the world's affliction with death and decay, the wise do not lament, knowing the world's terms." Weeping or grief, according to the Buddha, will not bring you peace of mind. His agony, on the other hand, will be greater, and his body will suffer. He will become sick and pallid, but this sorrow will not save the dead. "Whoever desires peace should draw out the arrow of lamentation, discontent, and grief," he added. He who has drawn the arrow and become composed will find peace of mind; he who has overcome all anguish will be blessed and free of grief."

Answer the following question in 80 – 100 words: 4 Marks

Chekov has used humor and exaggeration in the play to comment on courtship in his times. Illustrate with examples from the lesson, 'The Proposal.' Also, mention the values, you think, any healthy relationship requires.

Ans: The Proposal by Anton Chekov is a farce centered on clichéd characters such as the dishonest Tschubukov, the hypochondriac Lomov, and the astute Natalia. Lomov, who drinks water, places his palm on her heart, then flees to the door and "staggers out," sets the tone of ridiculousness with simple and foolish elements that get a shade of exaggeration. Matilda's subsequent hysteria, which causes her to collapse on the armchair and groan for a long time, is yet another example of farce. The sudden and abrupt shift from mutuality to humiliation, such as Lomov referring to Tschubukov as a "Swindler" and Tschubukov's retaliation, is a comedy. Tschubukov mocks marriage by informing his daughter that “a merchant who has come to buy goods” has arrived instead of notifying her directly about the visit of the suitor for delivering his marriage proposal. Chekov has also captured the narrow-minded image of Russian landowners who place a premium on property estates and personal pride over love and marriage.

Mutual respect, understanding, and willingness to comprehend and compromise on the side of both partners are all necessary for a relationship to remain healthy and pleasant. Every connection is a responsibility, and one should be willing to repair oneself and the other whenever necessary. Also, ego should be replaced with self-respect and unreserved confession of one's shortcomings.

What was Mr. Otto Frank’s major contribution to the world?

Ans: In a diary handed to her by her father, Anneliese Marie or Anne Frank, the Jewish daughter of Mr. Otto Frank, wrote about her experiences hiding with her family and four friends in Amsterdam during the German occupation of the Netherlands during World War II. Her family had moved to Amsterdam after the Nazis took power in Germany, but they were stuck when the occupation of the Netherlands was extended. In July 1942, as persecutions against Jews became more severe, the family fled into hiding of concealed rooms in her father's Mr. Otto Frank's business building.

The gang was deceived and sent to the concentration camp system after two years of hiding when Anne died of typhus. Her father, the group's sole survivor, arrived in Amsterdam to discover that her diary had been salvaged. He convinced himself that it was a one-of-a-kind record and had it published in English as "The Diary of a Young Girl." It details Anne's life from June 12, 1942, to August 1, 1944, when it was last updated. The diary, which has been described as the work of a mature and analytical intellect, provides an intimate look at daily life under the Nazis.

Anne describes herself as a 'little bundle of contradictions'. Why? Explain in your own words.

Ans: Anne Frank had been hiding from the Nazis in a secret room above her father's office since she was a toddler. She had kept fading feelings and a lot on her mind inside herself. Mr. Otto Frank, her father, gave her a diary to write down her emotional difficulties in order to assist her cope with the circumstance. Anne Frank defines herself as a "bundle of contradictions" in this diary. "My lighter, more superficial side will always steal a march on the deeper and so always win," she added, referring to herself as having two Annes, one frivolous and the other serious. Anne had been singled out for criticism on numerous occasions. She felt as if no one was trying to understand her, and she found it difficult to be herself or grow up according to her values in such a confining environment. "I'm used to not being taken seriously, but only 'lighthearted,'" she explained. If I put Anne in the spotlight for even fifteen minutes, she'll shut up like a clam when she's called upon to speak."

How did Helen benefit when Dr. Graham Bell accompanied her to the World Fair?

Ans: Helen was brought by Dr. Graham Bell to the World's Fair in Chicago in the summer of 1893. Helen was enthralled by the "miracles of creation, treasures of industry and talent, and all the activities of human life that literally went beneath her fingertips." She could see sights from Cairo, India, and Venice, as well as a model of Columbus' Santa Maria ship. Mr. Graham Bell informed her of the events at the fair and what was going on around her. They looked at the phones. Helen was enthralled by the gramophones, phonographs, and other innovations in the electric building. She even encountered anthropological artifacts that helped her understand how the human race progressed. She was ecstatic to connect with the bigger world outside of herself, which brought her closer to the world of technology and numeric.

How did Helen display her passion for Radcliffe College?

Ans: Helen's dream of attending Radcliffe College came true in 1896. She was ecstatic at the prospect of receiving an education alongside kids who were blind or deaf. As it was her desire to attend this college, she began her studies with zeal, hoping to find a practical fit for her creative world at the institution. Initially, she thought the lecture halls were brimming with the life of the noble and knowledgeable, and that the professors were the embodiment of wisdom. However, she was about to experience serious disillusionment. She quickly realized that school was not the enthralling place she had imagined. Helen expresses her dissatisfaction in the following words: "Many of the illusions that had enchanted my early innocence became exquisitely constrained and "disappeared into the flash of a typical day." I deliberately began to learn that attending college had drawbacks.``
